THESE ACRES

How long these acres will be possessed by many men will stride at dawn Bangor House and as I watched the automobiles passing, and looked at those parked by the curb; and as I watched the well dressed people, and noticed those children eating ice cream cones as they passed; and as I saw several people get out of an International bus that had come from Calais, and get into a Coast Coach bus going through Vermont to Boston and beyond, I thought that if citizens of England, France, Germany, and other European countries, could see what I had seen, they would be glad to swap their "depression" for ours.

There were cars on the street that would be taxed $150 or $200 a year in England and others less expensive could not be owned in many places in the countries mentioned.

If the people from other countries should be in Dover-Foxcroft on a Saturday night and see the cars parked on Monument Square, and the Bank building, many of them containing people from the farms, they would wonder why we talk about "depression."

And I considered some of the causes of unemployment. Take the woolen industry, for instance, a matter that has concerned this and other towns in the country very vitally. In the days when the industry was prospering (in times of peace) the female employees went to their work wearing woolen garments; today, many of them may not wear a particle of wool. And the female employees of cotton mills are wearing very much less of cotton fabric than they did in the prosperous days of that industry.

Be the woolen and cotton industries have suffered from changes in custom and habit. A great many men who used to wear heavy wool suits and heavy wool underwear in winter, now wear no heavier than they do in summer; steam heated buildings and closed automobiles, if they ride at all, do not make heavy garments unless it is an overcoat necessary.

And the way the women dress in winter would shock their ancestors. To be sure, many of them wear fur coats such as the ancestors never saw nor dreamed of, but their woolen dresses and underskirts and woolen stockings are of the past, as a rule.

Many other modern fashions, or customs, have curtailed business. The great corset factory at Worcester, Mass., was out of business the last I knew. When corsets were practically abandoned, the product was changed to girdles, but that was not successful and a large number of employees had to look for other work.

The present style of women's footware has decreased the amount of leather used and thrown men in tanneries out of work and it must be that fewer hands are needed in the shoe factories. To go to the other extreme, the head, the present style of hats has upset the millinery business and compelled a great number of women and girls to get other positions or be idle.

So far, the decrease in employment has been placed largely on the women, but men who go bareheaded summer and winter contribute to the lessening of the hat business, and their change from heavy to light underwear, that has been mentioned, has decreased that industry.

Competition and over extension in mill property have caused much unemployment. In order to get business the textile manufacturers have put in automatic looms, for instance, which have displaced operatives.

A great source of unemployment is the railroads which have been compelled to lay off a large number of men. For this the general public is largely to blame. In the year ending June 30, 1930, the Maine railroads carried 7,723,333 passengers and in the following year, 8,231,334. Today a great many trains have been taken off those roads because people ride in automobiles and have their freight carried by White. On the White Mountain division of the Maine Central, a train goes from Portland in the morning and returns at night. A truck goes from Fryeburg to Portland daily and another goes from New Hampshire to Portland.

The change on the branch between here and Dexter has put a "hogtie" on a job and discouraged the plans of other men connected with the road. The store delivery of freight by the railroad has deprived truckmen of business but back of all this, as I have said, are the people who do not patronize the trains.

Another change that older people will recall is that of blacksmiths, carriage ironers, carriage and sleigh builders, and repairers, and carriage and sleigh painters. I can recall at least 8 men who did such work in or near Union Square and there were probably as many in Foxcroft.
At an earlier period there were several in the vicinity of Merrick Square. There were, also, several harnessmakers in Dover and Foxcroft where now there are two.
At present there is one horseshoer and one iron-worker in the region of Union Square and none near Merrick Square.
There are two shops on the Foxcroft side where shoeing and iron work are done.

These latter changes have been brought about by the use of automobiles and trucks. I cannot recall when I have seen a new carriage or new sleigh, nor a new single harness.

Garages and filling stations have given employment to men which will in a measure offset the unemployment caused by the changes mentioned, but they fall far short of making up for the loss of blacksmiths in the small towns that will not support garages.

The automobile business as a whole has in its years of prosperity given employment to a great many men and the tourists have increased business, but the attempt "to make two blades of grass grow upon a spot where only one grew before," so to speak, has been overdone in filling stations, overnight camps, etc. and has caused much loss, as can be seen by the abandoned filling stations, the unopened roadside refreshment places, and the unoccupied over night camps.

It is a period of readjustment and no man can tell what the outcome will be.
"Pegging away," hoping for better things, appreciating the improvement that comes, and doing all we can to better the situation.

OUR CHURCHES

Would it be better if the churches had less to say about creeds and more to say about Christ? Does it make any real difference what one creed is, if only we have Him? These questions are often put forward. A popular poet has expressed the thought in the well-known lines:

Not what, but Whom, I do believe,
For Christ is more than all the creeds,
And His full life of gentle deeds Shall out the creeds outlive.

Not what I do believe, but Whom!
Who walks beside me in the gloom!
Who shares the burden weary ones Who all the day with me am I, And bids me look beyond the tomb
The larger life to live!

Not what I do believe,
But Whom!

Thoughtless, Criminal Carelessness

From Bridgton News

The unfortunate accidents which have occurred in this locality recently calls attention to the fact that there is altogether too much promiscuous shooting about the woods and fields at this season of the year when so many people are scattered about on the lake shores and in the nearby woods. Our friends who come from the more thickly settled places, are apt to get the idea, with so much "out of doors" in this locality, that there is no danger involved in target practice.

Those not familiar with firearms have little conception of the distance which a bullet, even from a small bore rifle or pistol, will carry. Reports have reached us of bullets whizzing past the occupants of boats on some of the lakes, these bullets coming from the adjacent shores. It is dangerous, needless and one which should be discouraged.

There are enough places in this locality where one may indulge in target practice, with comparatively little danger to the general public, but these places should be selected with care and the people who other people who may be wandering about the woods or who may be on the lakes.
We were under the impression that there was a state law which forbade the discharge of firearms within a certain distance of a public highway, but we are not able to locate it.

The only statute which seems to bear on this subject is that relative to the possession of firearms by a non-resident in the fields and forests of the state.
This statute reads:

"The possession of any firearms in the fields or forests or on the waters or ice of the state by any person who is not a bona fide resident of the state, unless he therein, unless the person having such firearm in possession has in his possession a license duly issued to him and covering the period such firearm is found in his possession, shall be prima facie evidence of hunting in violation of law."

While this statute does not quite cover the point in question, it is well for out of state friends to familiarize themselves with its provisions, as they might find it rather an embarrassing situation, sometimes, to be reminded of the carelessness of any law which may or may not bear on this subject directly, there is sufficient statute law, in all probability, to cope with this situation and insofar as possible promiscuous shooting should be curbed before other accidents occur.

The E. H. Clough Park

At Meredith, N. H.

We are indebted to Edward H. Clough of Manchester and Meredith, N. H., for a very interesting pamphlet of twenty pages which he sent to the Editor of the Advertiser, and which tells "The Story of Clough Park" and describes the unique values, and stone work in and about the park, which was designed by Mr. Clough himself. In this pamphlet the "Story of the Stones" is told.

A remarkable collection and of unusual interest are these stones from twenty-three states, three territories, District of Columbia, and fifteen foreign countries.

Many are old shapes, others of great beauty, and not a few have an interesting history connected therewith.

How did it happen? How did it come about that these, more than 300, stones surmount the sea wall, or adjoin the same at the head of Meredith Bay, Lake Winni-pesaukee, N. H.?

In the year 1924, Mr. Edward H. Clough bought the 240 feet of frontage on the lake directly opposite the "Old Homestead" where he was born. This shore line was irregular, rough and jagged.
At one end was the "Old Oak", a landmark locally prized, but, being uncarved for, it was gradually dying.

Mr. Clough cleaned out the decayed wood from the interior of the great hollow within the tree's trunk and filled it with cement. He also built a sea wall around two sides of the tree, covered its exposed roots and graded around the adjoining corner. And now this venerated tree is flourishing and a sight of beauty.

A number of old shaped stones, mostly taken from the lake, were imbedded in upright positions upon the wall. Here was born the idea or suggestion, that prompted friends, and not a few strangers among the summer tourists, to contribute other stones of peculiar interest.

To accommodate the increasing number of these stones the sea wall was extended the full length of the 240 feet of shore line. And there they are—a unique collection.

Midway the sea wall is an arch, bearing the inscription: "CLOUGH PARK".
Surmounting this arch is a bronze eagle, which formerly adorned the bow of the warship, Raleigh, which witnessed the battle of Manila Bay, under Admiral Dewey.
F. B. Honywill, donor.

At the end of the stone pier, directly in front of the arch, is a pair of bronze herons, realistically posed. They are the gift of Lester H. Hagg.

The deer, in recumbent posture, at the vest of the arch, came from "The Willows", the river estate of Mrs. Frederick Smyth of Manchester, and was the appreciated gift from the widow of New Hampshire's Civil War Governor, George H. Moore.

Midway the greensward, almost back of the deer, is the white marble base of a column that at one time graced the front of the White House at Washington, D. C.
This was the contribution of Senator George H. Moore.

There follow several paragraphs telling of the statues and steamboat anchors, also of one of the three pairs of eagle wings "cast from the brass fittings of the battleship Maine, which that ill-fated craft was raised from her watery grave in Havana harbor", and of a bronze sundial made in Japan and evidently intended for use in France, for the inscription, literally translated as "Time passes. Friendship endures," is in the French language.

A perusal of the list of stones, which gives their size and general appearance, as well as the place from which they came, and the donor, shows that they range in size from one inch in height and one inch in greatest diameter to 21 inches in height and 19 inches in diameter.
Among the places listed are King Solomon's Temple in Jerusalem, the River Jordan, Memphis, Egypt, the edge of the desert; the Acropolis and the Parthenon, Athens; the Rock of Gibraltar, the Celebes Island, M. Vesuvius, the Kimberly Mines in South Africa; the Barbara Frischlin house, and a site where the first blood of the Revolution was shed, at Westminster, Vt., John Brown's fort, and the battlefields of Gettysburg and Antietam.

There is also a part of the boiler of the old steamboat, Bolman, blown off of Steamboat Island in Lake Winnepesaukee in 1846; meteorites from Mount Mousilauke, donated by the men who saw their fall, in 1849 and 1859; a stone marked "O" which Theodore Roosevelt placed at the porch of his home at Oyster Bay, N. Y., and which Mrs. Roosevelt presented to Mr. Clough, who was appointed postmaster at Manchester for two terms by President Roosevelt; and one marked "O" from President Grover Cleveland's summer home at North Sandwich; the keystone of an arched door of an old Spanish mission church (1600) in Florida; a spearhead from Panama City; lava from an ancient heathen temple in Hawaii and coral from Bermuda, Montserrat, San Cuba, the Philippines, and the Red Sea.

The pamphlet contains a portrait of Mr. Clough and pictures of the vicinity of Clough Park, the old oak, the Indian statues, etc.

Last month there was added to Mr.
Clough's collection a large petrified specimen of one of the oldest trees in the world. This specimen, said to be millions of years old, comes from sandstone quarries in the Catskills and was secured for Mr. Clough by J. Briddle Smith, vice-president and general manager of the Public Service Company of New Hampshire, through the cooperation of Hugh Nash, Inc., who are building a dam in the Catskills, as part of the new water supply system for New York City.

Of this addition to Mr. Clough's collection, the Manchester Leader says:

Other specimens of this tree fern from this locality, the only place where they have been found, have been sent to fan-ous museums in various parts of the world.

These trees have a special interest not only because the fossils of the rock in which they were found show clearly that they flourished in the Devonian Age or age of fishes, the earliest age in which life became at all abundant, but because they differed from most plants of their time in that they produced seeds. Seed-bearing plants did not become numerous until long ages later.

MAINE COUNCIL OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

A series of four regional State Conventions are being held in four widely separated areas of Maine in order to reach a larger number of Sunday school workers with inspiration and help for their tasks.

The Educational Committee of the Maine Council has planned for four sessions to be held as follows: Mars Hill, Oct. 11; Belfast, Oct. 12; Livermore Falls, Oct. 13; Kennebec, Oct. 14.

Local committees in each place are hard at work to make the programs all that may be desired. Following are the keymen in each section: Northern, Hon.
Harvey A. Tompkins, eastern, Rev. O. L.
Pleasant, central, Rev. Chester B.
Oliver, southern, Rev. J. Wesley Prince.

Two teams of speakers will make the entire circuit, one car driven by Dr.
Leah A. Edwards of Bethel, President of the Maine Council and the other car driven by Prof. Ralph S. Booms of Bangor, The Council's vice president. Accompanying Dr. Edwards will be Edward B. Roderick, a member of the State Department of Education. Dr. Edwards and Mr. Roderick will be present at morning sessions where Dr. Edwards will preside and Mr. Roderick address the group on Character Education. There will also be a consideration of each morning session of the place of worship in building Christian character, with opportunity for discussions following the addresses.

The small church school will be the subject of each hour's conversation, each afternoon, with some of the problems and possibilities presented in on address, followed by general discussion. Similar groups considering Children's Work, Civic Building and Leadership Training will occupy the balance of the afternoon.

Each evening at 6 there will be two banquets, one for youth and one for adults.
Rev. Erwin L. Shaver of Boston will address the youth and Dr. George B. Hun-tley of Cambridge, Mass., the adults. Dr.
Huntley is also the speaker in the evening.

ANECDOTE

Complimentary. An aged clergyman and rather an eccentric one withal, whose field of labor was a town in the interior of New England, one Sunday, at the close of his services, gave notice to his congregation that in the course of the week he expected to go on a mission to the heathens.

The members of his church were struck with alarm and sorrow at the sudden and unexpected announcement of the loss of their beloved pastor and one of the deacons in great agitation, exclaimed, "Why my dear sir, you have never told us one word of this! What shall we do?"

"Oh, brother C—," said the parson, with the greatest sangfroid, "I don't expect to go out of town!"
